As an RIA senior wholesaler supporting independent financial professionals for Pacific Life, Matt works closely with his customers to help address the legacy, protection, estate, retirement, business, and agricultural-planning needs of clients.

He has spent over a decade working across multiple segments of the financial services industry, including annuities, defined contributions, alternatives, and traditional investments.

Matt began his career at Jackson National, where he gained an in-depth understanding of the products and solutions that help financial professionals and clients reach their goals. He's worked with several leading firms, including Cantor Fitzgerald, where he was the regional director for the Midwest representing alternative and traditional lines of investments.

Outside of the office, Matt is often found on the course defending his title as an average golfer and enjoys spending time with his wife, Jackie, and their two children.
